Amsterdam/New York is bringing the photography works of Dutch artist, Hendrik Kerstens to Miami International Art Fair and Art Palm Beach.

When Hendrik Kerstens decided to dedicate himself entirely to photography in 1995, he turned to a model very near at hand: his daughter Paula. He wanted to document all the important moments in her life, to 'be there', to capture something of the fleeting moments that fade from memory all too quickly. The inquisitive eye of the photographer plays an important part in the process: he sets out to catch a glimpse of his subject's secret being and tries to understand what it is he sees. These 'portraits' and 'tronies' (the 17th century Dutch word for faces or heads) refer in their execution to both the Dutch masters and the portraits of the Italian Renaissance
